WORKING IN FRANCE

Working for financial support when you are a student is very common. Working part time in France will not allow you to cover all your expenses, but it is a useful addition. It is important!

All foreign students have the right to work while they are studying in France if they are registered with an establishment affiliating them to the student social security scheme (and have a residence permit if they are not a national of the E.U.)

This right applies to all students (but Algerian nationals and doctoral students need to obtain an APT - provisional work permit from the DIRECCTE of their places of residence) including those arriving in France for the first time or enrolled in their first year. French law allows students to work a maximum of 964 hours a year. This represents about twenty hours a week. In France, there is a minimum wage, SMIC (minimum growth wage), which is €10.03, gross per hour of work.
